GALLIA TO THE RESCUE

The Texan Relieves Ayers and Holds the Clevelanders Runless for Five Innings.

By WILLIAM FEET.

John Henry's slashing single through Terry Turner in the ninth inning after two had perished, scored Jameson from second base with the run which beat the Cleveland Indians, 4 to 3.

Cleveland grabbed three runs early in the game, while Doc Ayers was on the job, and the Griffmen knotted the count in the fourth, sending "Handsome" Fred Beebe to the showers.

Gallia relieved Ayers, and Gould succeeded Beebe. Both relief twirlers were presently in danger, but it was Gould who succumbed to the bombardment, and John Henry who delivered the hit in the pinch.

From a spectators' standpoint the contest was a fine one to watch—there was plenty of hitting by both clubs and a number of sparkling fielding plays.

Doc Ayers twirled better ball than the score shows. He put himself in a couple of bad holes, once by failing to cover first base and once by fumbling an easy bunt. Had Ayers covered the bag in the first inning the visitors would not have counted.

The Indians grabbed thirteen hits to Washington's twelve. The Nationals had two errors, one of them proving costly, and the Indians one miscue, and this "boot" by Chapman will probably serve as the big alibi for Henry "Perch" Edwards and Ernest J. Laugan, Sixth City scribes, here with the club.

Cleveland lost no time going after runs, pushing across two in the opening chapter on singles by Wamby, Speaker and Gandil, the failure of Ayers to cover first on Speaker's blow and Williams' bad peg to McBride to turn back Gandil after Chick had been caught flat-footed.

Graney doubled to start Cleveland's third. Wamby bunted, the ball being fumbled by Ayers and permitting Graney a safe journey to third base. Speaker's long fly to Moeller scored Graney. This represented all the Indians could do in the way of tallies, for when the fifth opened Bert Gallia was in the box, and although touched up freely permitted no runs.

The veteran Beebe held our side scoreless for three innings, but in the fourth the jig was up, and the Griffmen jumped on even terms with the Ohio crowd.

Shanks, for a starter, flew to Smith. Jameson walked and chased over to third on Henry's double, the ball getting away from Tris Speaker. McBride tied to Speaker, but Chapman an easy grounder, the ball shooting through Chapp's props. This error scored Jameson and Henry. Danny Moeller followed with a safe blow to right, and on Foster's duplicate wallop, Rice crossed the plate, tying the score.

In the sixth and eighth innings, the Nationals had runners within striking distance of the plate, but could not score them.

The big blow-off came in the ninth. Williams died on a hard-hit grounder to Wamby. Shanks walked, but tried to sneak a big lead off first, the result being that Gould's peg to Gandil turned Shanks back at second base, Gandil shooting the ball to Chapman. Jameson dropped the ball into short left field and by fast sprinting beat Graney's throw, pulling up safely on second base. Henry singled through Turner, who made a gallant stab at the ball, but it eluded him, and Jameson fairly flew home with the winning run. Score:

BOSTON AND BROWNS IN GREAT CONTEST

Boston, July 14.—Boston and St. Louis looked up in a sensational seventh inning routhless tie today. Koo, the young southpaw, went the entire distance for the Browns, while Mays went fifteen innings, being replaced by Leonard when he was injured in a play at the plate. Koo's carelessness cost him the game. He failed to touch third when a hit would have scored him from second in the fifteenth inning. It was on the play at the plate that Mays was hurt.
